

The Sky is Falling ... Why we only are blaming the President.

Listening to all the hype of the past few weeks of how we have so many things to fear(The Sky is Falling), I ask myself what has changed to cause this? Is this change only in the Gov't and specifically in our President? Is he the problem?

With problems occurring in our Education system, Medical industry, Our Gov't agencies(children immigration), Software Industry (health care roll-out), industry (auto recalls), Financial Industry, Defense Industry (grounding of new jet fighter), Inflation, School Systems and Law Enforcement (incarcerations) it is difficult to see the Presidents hand in all of this.

In my humble opinion we are solving the wrong problem by blaming the President. We need to look deeper at our society and cultural changes to find the true problem. The President is just an easy scapegoat versus solving the difficult real problem. As many of our great thinkers have said; the solution lies in understanding what the real problem is before we tag a solution. Something that is hard to do.

We're not the missed steps in the Texas hospital not a human problem of carelessness. This is a problem within all of our society. Is not the cutting of funds for our health network or the poor execution in our Gov't agencies the same lack of attention to details in our work environment? We find blame in the other person as the problem versus looking at ourselves.
